\f0\insrsid9446906\charrsid11347269 The facts leading to the conviction and sentence of the appellant may be summarised as follows. On 14.04.1997, at Nambogo village in Kamuli District, the parents of the deceased, one Isanga left him at home and went to attend to their garden. On their return, they did not find the boy at home. A search for him was mounted. Subsequently, the body of the boy was found buried in a shallow grave in a bush. The appellant became the prime suspect in the murder of t he child because at the time of the child disappearance, his wife saw him within the vicinity of the scene of murder, apparently having escaped from prison where he was serving a sentence of imprisonment for theft.

\par }\f0\insrsid9446906\charrsid11347269

The appellant was later arrested on the strength of his wife's information and on being charged, he confessed to the murder of the child. At his trial he retracted his confession and pleaded an alibi

to the effect that he was in prison at the time the murder was committed. His defence was rejected and he was convicted for murder contrary to Sections 183 and 184 of the Penal Code Act and sentenced to death. His appeal to the Court of Appeal was dismiss ed. Hence this appeal.

His Memorandum of Appeal to this court contained three grounds of appeal framed as follows:

That the learned Justices of Appeal erred in law and fact in upholding the findings of the learned trial judge that the appellant's charge and caution statement was voluntary.

That the learned Justices of Appeal erred in law and fact when they failed to evaluate the evidence as a whole and as a result came to a wrong decision.

y admitted in evidence. Mr. Muguluma submitted that no one explained why the appellant had been arrested and taken to Kamuli Police Station instead of being returned to prison from where he had escaped. According to appellant's counsel's opinion, both the trial judge and the Court of Appeal heavily relied on the prosecution's evidence. The appellant's own evidence and his defence of {\cs31\i\f0\insrsid9446906\charrsid11347269 alibi } learned counsel for the respondent contended, and rightly, in our opinion, that after the appellant had retracted his confession, the trial court held a trial-within-a-trial and found that the confession was indeed voluntary. On the 2 and 3 grounds, it was the contention of counsel for the State that all the material pieces of evidence surrounding the murder and how the appellant was implicated in it had been fully explained and properly assessed by both the learned trial judge and the Justices of the Court of Appeal.

We agreed with learned Principal State Attorney for the respondent that all the three grounds of appeal lacked merit.

confession was voluntary. We agreed with the findings of the learned Justices of Appeal when in their judgment they held,

"According to the evidence of D. I. P. Meshak Mulobole (PW6), there is no doubt that the appellant was subjected to some beating after his arrest and before he gave his confessional statement We are, however, of the view that the beating was not connected with the confession. According to the evidence of Moses Waibale (PW 5) of the Local Defence Unit (LDU), who arrested the appellant, it was not known that the appellant was a suspect in a murder case at the time of his arrest. He was only being arrested for having escaped from prison. This case must be distinguished from Mateo Ochieng v. Uganda.

(S. C), Crim. Appeal No. 25/2000 (unreported), in that the appellant made a statement in the presence of a military Captain who had a pistol .

high is not the case here, in our view the judges correctly held that the statement was voluntary, he also properly considered the law concerning a repudiated confession and rightly applied it to the facts of this case."

On grounds 2 and 3, it was dear to us that apart from the appellant's confession, the case against him depended on circumstantial evidence. This c onsisted partly of the evidence of his wife that on the day of the murder, and while she was taking her goats to the bush to graze, she saw the appellant seated in the bush near where the victim's body was later found buried in a shallow grave. She furthe testified that on seeing her, the appellant ran away. In our view, the behaviour of the appellant at the time cannot be that of an innocent escapee from prison. The wife's evidence supports the confession of the appellant which was further corroborated b the evidence of Moses Waibale (PW 5). PW 5's evidence was that the appellant who had escaped from prison was in hiding and a search found him hiding in a house within the vicinity of the murder scene even though all that PW 5 knew at the time was that th e appellant was only wanted because he had escaped from prison. In our view, the } appellant's confession together } with the evidence adduced for the prosecution amply justified the conviction of the appellant. It was for these reasons that we dismissed his appeal.
